Amsonia hubrichtii, or Threadleaf Blue Star, is an herbaceous perennial native to the southern United States. It is best known for its fine, needle-like foliage and clusters of pale blue star-shaped flowers that bloom in late spring. In autumn, the foliage turns a brilliant golden-yellow, providing stunning seasonal interest in gardens.

This low-maintenance plant thrives in full sun to partial shade and prefers well-drained soils. It is drought-tolerant and deer-resistant, making it a popular choice for borders, rock gardens, and naturalized areas. Amsonia hubrichtii is valued for its adaptability, ornamental appeal, and ability to support pollinators.
